[Comment: The wording of the above order is exactly the same as that published at this time last year.]

Glavvoyentorg Subordinate to Ministry of Trade USSR

Further evidence that Glavvoyentorg (Main Administration for Military Trade) is subordinate to the Ministry of Trade USSR, not the Ministry of Defense, is contained in the obituary of Colonel V. Ye. VASIL'CHENKO*.

VASIL'CHENKO's obituary, which identified him as deputy chief of Glavvoyentorg, was published on 24 August 1955 in Vechernyaya Moskva by "colleagues and the party commission of the Ministry of Trade USSR."

VASIL'CHENKO was previously identified as Deputy Chief of Glavvoyentorg (Krasnaya Zvezda, 3 August 1954), and Glavvoyentorg was identified as a component of the Ministry of Trade USSR in an advertisement for tailors which appeared in Sovetskaya Belorussiya, 21 July 1954.

Local Antiair Guard (MPVO)

An article concerning deactivation and sanitation measures to be taken in the event of an atomic explosion, discussed the role of the MPVO (Mestnaya protivovozdushnaya okhrana) in carrying out these measures in populated areas. (Moscow, Komsomol'skaya Pravda, 16 Jul 55)

[Comment: An apparent change in the meaning of the letter "o" in the abbreviation MPVO has taken place in Soviet usage. The Bol'shaya sovetskaya entsiklopediya, Volume 47, 1940, expanded MPVO to "Mestnaya protivovozdushnaya oborona," which expansion agrees with the still-used abbreviation PVO (Protivovozdushnaya oborona). However, Volume 27 of the latest edition of the Bol'shaya, which went to press on 18 June 1954, expands the abbreviation MPVO to "Mestnaya protivovozdushnaya okhrana," and a similar expansion appears in the Posobiye po mestnoy PVO (Handbook for Local PVO), published in 1954 by the Water Transport Publishing House.

This name change has not, however, brought about any change in duties and responsibilities for MPVO, since both editions of the Bol'shaya and the Posobiye set these down in very much the same wording. The change seems to be merely a desire to differentiate the two organizations, one of which (PVO) is concerned with active defense measures, and the other (MPVO) with passive, or "civil," defense measures.]
